Justice Field Has Passed Away.

sociate justice during the Cleveland administration, but so strong was his dislike for the then president that he continued in office until President McKinley could appoint his successor, which he did in the person of Judge McKenna, another California jurist.

In addition to his political honors, Williams College, in 1864, conferred the degree of LL. D. on him and in 1869 he was appointed professor of law in the University of California, an institution in which he always took great pride.

Judge Field's three brothers, David Dudley, Cyrus W., and Henry Martyn, left their impress upon the history of the United States, and his sister, Emilia, is the mother of Justice Brewer, of the United States supreme court.

Is Doing Good Immoral?

The enormous sale in England of "In His Steps; or, What Would Jesus Do?" by the Rev. Charles M. Sheldon has attracted the attention of the literary reviews of both continents, and one eminent critic has created something sensational by declaring the book immoral because it is an attack on the existing order of things. He cannot restrain his disgust because "In His Steps" shows so plainly that as we live now it is impossible to lead a Christian life. This critic and Mr. Sheldon stand for two great opposing forces. The former is for letting things be, for not disturbing the thieves in the temple or mentioning the devouring of widows' houses by makers of long prayers, for a fat and greasy contentment that serves mammon under the cloak of God. Mr. Sheldon is for a Christianity of deeds. He asks for a new order of things because a better order is needed. He would follow Christ's steps to the kingdom of heaven, even though the march does overturn flesh pots and leave behind some gilded things; because he would do this and claim as his brother in the march those whose armor may be more ragged than golden, though their purpose be most steadfast, is the author of "In His Steps" immoral?

MOTHERS

recovering from the illness attending childbirth, or who suffer from the effects of disorders, derangements and displacements of the woman's organs, will find relief and a permanent cure in Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. Taken during pregnancy, the "Prescription" makes childbirth easy, by preparing the system for parturition, thus assisting nature and shortening "labor." The painful ordeal of childbirth is robbed of its terrors and made almost painless, and the dangers thereof greatly lessened to both mother and child. The period of confinement is also greatly shortened, the mother strengthened and built up, and an abundant secretion of nourishment for the child promoted. If the married woman be delicate, run-down, or over-worked, it worries her husband as well as herself. This is the proper time to build up her strength and cure those weaknesses, or ailments, which are the cause of her trouble. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription dispels aches and pains, melancholy and nervousness, brings refreshing sleep and makes a new woman of her.

"You say the popular Miss Smith can play the piano. I never heard her."

"That's just the point. She can, but she doesn't."—Chicago Post.

Mamma—Robby, Robby! Is this an ink-spot on the library carpet?

Robby (hastily)—An ink-spot? No, indeed, mamma! Not if I got it there.—Judge.

"Do you play cards?"

"Only for small stakes."

"It's all right if you play for something to eat but I won't hear of you playing for money."—Pittsburg Press.

"Why do you say that you will marry only a widow?"

"Well, I think it is the part of wisdom to get some one who has already discovered that men are not angels."—Chicago Post.

A coal dealer had occasion to call on one of his customers and found him sifting ashes. With business instinct he inquired: "Well, my friend, what kind of ashes are you sifting now?"

"I can't say exactly what kind they are," was the reply, "but I know they are not the ashes of the just."—Richmond Dispatch.

An Unlucky Man—"Hit dem seem," sighed the old lady, "that my John hain't got any good luck in this world. He went in the war an' they shot off his leg. That wux somethin'—kaze he got a pension for it. But on his way home the train run off the track an' instead o' cutting off his good leg, so's he could git damages, it run over his wooden leg, an' to my sartin knowledge he's been in a life insurance company ten years, an' he ain't dead yit, an' 'pears like thar ain't no prospects of it. I never did see a man hold on like him!"—Atlanta Constitution.
